Raveloe Beats Ten Broeck's Famous Record by Half a Second.

He Runs a Mile in the Straight at Monmouth Park in 1.30%.

Owners, riders and bettors at the race, track are facing a new record to-day. The fastest mile ever recorded on the American turf was run yesterday at Monmouth Park, affording a topic of conversation among lovers of fast horses even more engrossing than the weather.

It was Thomas Puryear & Co.'s threeyear-old colt Ravelos that sclipsed Ten Breeck's long-standing record of 1. 39%. and Racine's more or less spocryphal quarter of a second better. It was a surprise party for the talent, and a matter of interest to all admirers of fast

It was the Newark Stakes. Eight threeyear-olds lined up before Starter Caldwell, Mr. Belmont's Clarendon being a 9 to 5 favorite. Raveloe, with G. Covington up had 7 to 1 against him, the original odds of 12 to 1 having been hammered down by the knowing ones.

Raveloe is a weil-made, compact, muscular son of Joe Hooker, and had never been regarded as wonderfully fast; but he fluished a length ahead of Druidess, Tulla Blackburn, with Garrison up, trailing four lengths behind the place horse.

On the blackboard were at once displayed the figures ... 89½, which pro-claimed that the record had been smashed.

Ten Brock's great mile record was run when that famous horse was five years old on a specially prepared track, at Louis-ville Ry., May 24, 1877, against time. He carried 110 pounds. This record was carried 110 pounds. This record was never touched till the present year, when it was claimed that Racine pulled it down a quarter of a second at Washington Park. Chicago. There are many racing men who are very dubious of the genuineness of Chicago, There are many rangements of Racine's performance.

Raveloe's mile was run in a field of eight, on a track sticky under a thin layer of dust, with 107 pounds in the saddle. It was in the straight, and was a phenomenal performance by what had been considered a second-rate horse.

The office of the United Irishman, in Chambers street, has become almost deserted, and the friends of the eminent revolutionists who come to call upon him are puzzled to know what has become of their former chief, who used to keep open house in the little third-story cubby bole.

The desk is now covered with a layer of dust a quarier of an inch thick, and the old linen duster, with a dagger slit in the back, which was worn by Rossa in one of his encounters with murderous emissaries of the British Government, hangs on the wall, a pathetic reminder of the good old it is the desire of the Commissioners to wall, a pathetic reminder of the good old days when accounts of explosions in Lon-don underground railways and the dyna-miting of public buildings at the British capital were served up for breakfast every day by the morning papers.
